The Story of a Girl Who Sought Only Love

"If my heart is a rose that you wish to pluck, take it, crush it, sift its petals through your fingers. Waste me, if you call love a waste. I am satisfied to be the rose of your day — to give off my fragrance for you."

This startlingly unusual novel by a well-known writer is going to cause discussion, because—if for no other reason—it strikes a new note.

Four Books You Can Confidently Recommend

SCISSORS

By CECIL ROBERTS

A novel of Youth in all its vigor, hope and beauty. "Scissors" is the nickname of the hero, an English lad, first met under the burning suns and turquoise skies of Asia Minor, then seen in his English school, and later as a journalist in London. His magnetic personality makes him the most attractive character we've met in years. Published March 29 Net $2.00

FAMILY

By WAYLAND WELLS WILLIAMS

Author of "Goshen Street," etc.

Where old New England stands now—a novel of heredity and environment in a New England town. Everyone who knows New England at all knows just such a family as lives in these vivid pages. Here's a novel in which the old social traditions are sharply contrasted with the modern views—a novel with a big popular appeal, in which New England is pictured unflinchingly by one born and brought up there. Published March 29 Net $2.00

MR. AND MRS. SEN

By LOUISE JORDAN MILN

Author of "Mr. Wu," "The Feast of Lanterns," etc.

What happens when East marries West? In this novel an English society girl marries a wealthy Oxford-bred Chinese. They live in London, in Washington, where we get much about the diplomatic set, and in China. It is in China, in an aristocratic home ruled by an old Chinese grandmother—the strongest character of the book—that the most colorful and dramatic scenes of the story occur. Just Published Net $2.00

STORIES, DREAMS AND ALLEGORIES

By OLIVE SCHREINER

Author of "Dreams," "The Story of an African Farm," etc.

A notable and charming book, the last of Olive Schreiner's imaginative writings (except a novel to be published later). "Every page of the book is worth reading. . . . Here is the soul and mind of a woman who saw deeply and felt tremendously. . . . A rich aftermath for which we are thankful."—Hildegard Hawthorne, International Book Review. Cloth, 12mo Net $1.75

The PUBLIC SQUARE

By WILL LEVINGTON COMFORT

Author of "Routledge Rides Alone," etc.

The truth of the matter is that here is a novel that will appeal straight to American men and women today. Its powerful story, its unusual and delightful heroine, its clear presentation of what our bewildered youth and age are everywhere groping for, are all directly to the point with the entire novel-reading public. $2.00

STELLA DALLAS

It is with particular pleasure that we announce the publication in April of a new novel by Olive Higgins Prouty.

Our first reading of STELLA DALLAS convinced us that Mrs. Prouty has written a novel of extraordinary strength, and of the widest popular appeal. This belief was confirmed by the story's reception in the American Magazine, and by the letter from its editor from which we quote as follows:

"Your serial is going splendidly. It is thoroughly justifying the faith I had in the story when I saw it in the process of creation. In brief, I should call 'Stella Dallas' one of the most successful serials I have ever run in the American Magazine."

Recently a distinguished judge stated that the greatest question now before the American public was the problem of marital relations. This is the theme of STELLA DALLAS and seldom, if ever, has the theme been presented more vividly in fiction.

This does not mean that STELLA DALLAS is a problem novel. It is primarily an absorbing story, richly wrought and with the interest sustained at the highest point throughout. But dealing as it does with the effect of separation on husband and wife, and on their sensitive child, it touches at every point a subject of great and growing interest to the American public.

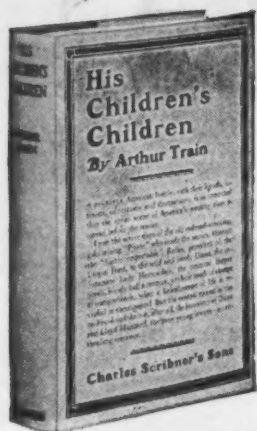

STELLA DALLAS will be thoroughly advertised and widely reviewed. It will be used as a text by ministers and as a theme in women's clubs. But even if it were not bound to be a subject of wide discussion, STELLA DALLAS would sell. For it is a fine story, finely told and of a type that is always in demand.

It is hoped that the trade will read this story and judge for themselves its real worth and distinct popularity.

HIS CHILDREN'S CHILDREN

By Arthur Train

Here are some of the reasons why this powerful novel has been reordered four times by many booksellers and why sales are mounting steadily every day:

Henry van Dyke in the New York Herald: "Here is a book which does for the New York of our own day what Thackeray's 'Vanity Fair' did for the London of a hundred years ago. It lifts the curtain and shows us in behind the scenes."

New York Sun*: "It is, as a novel should be, first of all a story, a cross section of life . . . An extraordinarily comprehensive, clear-seeing vision."

New York Times*: "An excellently sustained novel, by far the the most ambitious and successful piece of work he has ever turned out . . . Dexterity and grasp . . . It is a book that should add immeasurably to his reputation."

New York World*: "An admirably balanced and consistent piece of story-telling. We do not recall a moment in which the narrative stands still or even drags."

Sidney Williams in the Philadelphia North American: "One of the few stories of fashionable American society by a writer who personally knows much about it. Mr. Train is an artist to boot. An artist whose weaving imagination is checked by a lawyer's logical bent. Coolness and intuition, those rare associates, are his."

Boston Transcript: "Mr Train has been able to get a vision below the surface of things . . . He hasn't found a little fast circle, he has indicted an enormous public . . . Effective and absorbing . . . We are glad he wrote it."

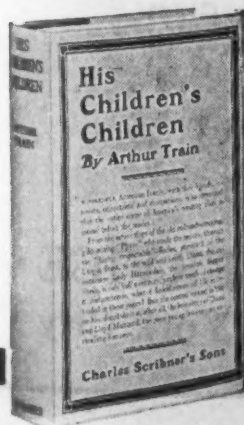

Detroit Saturday Night: "A very strong picture that can hardly fail to impress measurably any reader . . . A well-conceived, cohesive plot. The interest is well maintained and at times is intense . . . Places Mr. Train undoubtedly in the front rank of American novelists . . . Decidedly outstanding among the fiction of the season."

And these are only a few of the many fine comments—they could be continued almost indefinitely, for the actual truth is that this novel has been received with genuine enthusiasm everywhere. Praise for this book is pouring in from all sides, for it is one of those rare stories of universal appeal that do not appear every year. Booksellers are realizing more and more its tremendous possibilities. When Ward Macaulay of Detroit increased his original order, he wrote:

"Not only a very fine novel but one that offers special opportunities for a good sale. It reads to me like Winston Churchill in his best days."

"His Children's Children" is being backed by the strong advertising campaign that it so richly deserves

Q Elliot H. Paul and Harvey Fergusson are, among the younger American writers, making permanent literary places for themselves. Their "second novels," both of which I shall publish March 30th, are worthy members of a distinguished Spring list. In addition they are both of the type that attracts keen interest and arouses discussion.

IMPROMPTU

By ELLIOT H. PAUL

Author of "Indelible"

IMPROMPTU is a frank and somewhat ironic story of a young man and woman who possess neither economic independence nor strength of character. They are restless but not neurotic, unfortunate perhaps, but not vicious. The story begins in a suburb of Boston which has to this day retained a measure of its Puritan virtues and limitations. It ends in a section of Boston which was built by throwing ashes upon mud. Irwin Atwood and Dorothy Bliss are—at the start—types indistinguishable with a million others from their milieu. The dramatic course of their story, however, leads to a climax logical but unpredictable for the majority.

CAPITOL HILL

By HARVEY FERGUSSON

Author of "The Blood of the Conquerors"

A NOVEL of Washington life which Mr. H. L. Mencken calls "the first that attempts to describe genuinely typical Washingtonians and the essential Washington. What it seeks to do is to exhibit clearly the Washington that lies under the surface, the Washington of professional jobholders and manipulators, the Washington that really runs the country. The central character, Ralph Dolan, is a type quite new in American fiction, but he is wholly real." Mr. Mencken adds: "It has accuracy of observation, humor, and it tells a brisk and entertaining story." Picture jacket in colors. $2.50 net

BUILDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

By A. C. Burnham

Here is the real romance of business with all its strong appeal to every man of ambition and imagination. Nine out of every ten men have the longing to be in business for themselves, to get out on their own—and to every one of them this book will be of tremendous interest. To many of them it offers practical help in developing their enterprises—to many more it gives the inspiration of the success-stories of others.

Mr. Burnham, himself the builder of a successful business, has investigated many others to find how they were developed from small beginnings. What he discovered he presents here, and in chapters 8 and 9 he tells briefly in various lines and how they were made profitable. He shows definitely how to discover a new idea, how to test it out, how to plan and organize a small business, how to finance it, how to operate it.

The Stories of Fifty Enterprises

Here is a book that will sell fast—it appeals to something fundamental in every man's make-up. Just Published. 282 pp. $2.75.

Literary Causerie

THE subject of literary gossip and informal book discussion was ably discussed at the Women's National Book Association meeting by S. K. Ratcliffe, correspondent for the Manchester Guardian and popular lecturer in this country. Mr. Ratcliffe won considerable applause by his statement that our signed columns of literary gossip appeal to too narrow a book interest. He spoke of the great area of readers whose intelligence and reading habits are just turning to the field of book appreciation and who find in the type of book discussed in our literary columns very little food for their awakening book appetites.

This restates a subject that has already been very frequently discussed in the book-trade and especially in the publishing world. There is no doubt that the columnists and writers of signed book discussion have in the last few years had increasing influence on book talk and book purchases. They have obtained their power, because people have liked the personal note. Newspapers have found that not even the most popular of cartoonists can do more to keep readers continuously interested in a newspaper than the authors of the literary column. People become very loath to miss a single issue of the New York World, Post, or Tribune, for instance, lest they should overlook some interesting paragraph that their favorite columnist has composed that morning or evening as the case may be.

There have been two criticisms of these literary columns: One, often repeated, is that the writers spend too much time praising each other or the work of their intimate friends. The second is that the columnist's tastes in literature, while keen, are too little related to the tastes of the great masses of possible readers. In defense of the columnist on the first count, it is not out of the way to say that, as the fellow columnists are not likely to have more than one book a year, the injustice done to other writers in space allotment is more talked of than real. One has but to check over a month's paragraphs to see how negligible this point becomes.

Besides this, it is obvious that a man, whose popularity depends on his projecting thru his text his own personality and enthusiasm, must talk on those things that honestly arouse his enthusiasm. Mr. Ratcliffe instanced Christopher Morley's column, which he remarked he seldom missed, and the writers so frequently mentioned there: Santayana, Tomlinson, Melville, Montague, McFee. There is no evidence that any of these are Mr. Morley's personal friends, except the latter, and enthusiasm for McFee's work brought about the friendship, not the friendship the enthusiasm for the books. What has been done for such a worth-while revival as that of "Moby Dick" by continuous enthusiastic reference to the book by the columnist is recent literary history.

What seems to be wanted is not the removal of the personality or honesty of those famous columns, but new experiments with the personal type of gossip column by people with different enthusiasms. One New York paper has started a column with the very definite intention of interesting a wide audience of men in the street, altho, so far, no particular impression has been made by that columnist's work. An even more hopeful announcement of this kind comes from the Farm and Fireside, stating that in September a page of book talk for the magazine's 800,000 and more readers, will be conducted by Edward Anthony, whose "Book Factory" column of the New York Herald has attracted attention. Other such columns are perhaps in existence but do not come to mind at this writing.

What seems decidedly evident is that book comment with personality has come to stay, that it depends on individuality expressed in an absolutely honest way, which means that those writers who have the facility to capture the public's interest cannot hold it by writing about things that have not genuinely inspired their personal enthusiasm. Yet perhaps this same method be used by other writers of good technique but of varying tastes and enthusiasms, to increase book interest in new places.

Canadian Copyright

THE revision of Canadian copyright depends on the passage of a brief amendatory bill, introduced in February in Parliament, and printed in the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY of February 24th. This amendatory act was drafted by the Government and introduced by the Secretary of Trade and Commerce, Mr. Robb.

With as few strokes as possible, it eliminates the licensing clauses of the 1921 legislation, which were intended to bring additional work to Canadian printers at the expense, however, of the authors. The desire to build up local industry is easily understood in the United States, which has so long had its manufacturing clause, but in Canada, with its relatively small market, this condition would have been disastrous for authors.

This amending act is favored by the officers of the Canadian Authors' Association, but they have pointed out to the Government that, unless prompt steps after passage are taken to establish Canada's relation with non-Union countries (principally the United States), there will be a gap in copyright relationships which would be disastrous to the authors of both countries. They urged and the publishers of Toronto urged that an amendment be added to those offered, which would insure beyond peradventure that protection of mutual character would be immediately established with the United States as well as with the Unionist countries.

The Business Man's Books

BUSINESS books, which, as a separate classification in book publishing, scarcely existed twenty years ago and showed but little variety even ten years ago, are now such an accepted part of book sales and book distribution that new emphasis on them is hardly needed. There are very few well-stocked bookstores that do not have their shelf or complete section of business literature.

Not only do they produce good sales totals themselves, but they bring into the store a type of customer who is more than likely to be an important contributor to the year's total business.

The PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY has several times endeavored to serve the book-trade by preparing suitable lists, to enable the retailer to push this business, and has ready for publication this month perhaps the best list of this kind that was ever issued. It will be entitled "Books on Business," fifty-two pages, with an extremely careful selection of three hundred books, each one described and classified. The list has been prepared by Sarah B. Ball, formerly librarian of the business branch of the Newark Library, and contains, as a basis, the books selected by a referendum conducted by the American Library Association, which took up the matter with the heads of the principal schools of business. It is a list which includes the staple books as well as the newest books, and can be given by the bookstore to any customer with perfect confidence.

Book Binding and Rebinding

A SPECIAL study of book manufacture from the librarians' point of view has been made by the Book Binding Committee of the American Library Association, and, at the request of the National Association of Book Publishers, Miss Wheelock, chairman of the Committee, has analyzed the investigation and embodied it in a report entitled, "Danger Spots in Book Manufacture," which has been printed for the Publishers' Association and sent out to all members. Many publishers have asked for duplicate copies, in order that their different departments may have these points in mind. This report supplements the detailed work of the Committee, by which they send to the Publishers' Association itemized reports on individual books which are from there forwarded to the publishing offices.

In reply to the last reports, one publisher writes:

"The criticism about the calendered paper is a just one. We are pleased to state that we are planning to print the next editions of three juveniles on lighter weight paper."

Another reports: "What the Book Binding Committee say about that book of ours is right. We have cut off that supply of paper. We are glad to get these criticisms. They help us keep up to the mark."

Another wrote: "These suggestions are helpful, and, when next printing or binding, we will endeavor to comply with them."

The criticisms have been largely on books of which the paper does not stand the resewing either because of lack of firmness of texture or because of the calendered surface used in the effort to make the half-tones more effective.

The Merritt Bill and Its Prospects

By Waldon Fawcett

IF the book-trade is disappointed because the Merritt Bill for price standardization was not acted upon by this Congress, it will be pleased to learn of the arrangements being made for progress in the 68th Congress. Representative Merritt of Connecticut, and other thick-and-thin supporters of legalized price uniformity did not expect that progress would be possible in this crowded session; the bill was introduced merely as a matter of record and to invite criticism and discussion, both in governmental and business circles.

The Merritt Bill, H. R. 13,494—is substantially the measure printed in the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY, August 26, 1922. But tho the tentative draft was completed last summer and received at that time the endorsement of the Booksellers' Board of Trade and other organizations it was not until the close of the year that the bill was submitted to Congress and referred to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. The delay was due to a desire that the bill should be introduced by a member of the Commerce Committee. It was thought, at one time, that the bill which had originated with the American Fair Trade League and kindred forces might be fathered by Representative Samuel E. Winslow of Massachusetts, a prominent manufacturer of trade-marked goods and Chairman of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. It was finally arranged that the bill should be introduced by Representative Merritt, a member of the Commerce Committee, whose name has been associated in the past with various bills of one kind or another, looking to the protection of good will.

In one important respect the plans participated in by the Booksellers' Board of Trade last summer have not fallen out as per program. Originally it was thought that the new bill "to prevent discrimination in prices and to provide publicity of prices" would supplant the Kelly-Stephens Bill, the familiar price maintenance bill which, in slightly varying form, has been before Congress for a number of years past, and the latest version of which (H. R. 11) was put forward on April 11, 1921. There was some expectation that Representative Kelly would introduce the new bill as a substitute and either withdraw his earlier bill or allow it to lapse in favor of the new draft. But Representative Kelly maintains all his old faith in his familiar bill, and plans to reintroduce his bill, without change or modification, in the new Congress.

With two bills of a common underlying purpose there is likelihood of a contest in the Commerce Committee. However it has been brought home to the supporters of the respective bills that what is desired above all else is the triumph of the principle of price uniformity and that the common objective is the best bill obtainable and the one that will be acceptable to Congress. Accordingly Representative Merritt and Representative Kelly are conducting entirely friendly campaigns in behalf of their respective recipes.

The two Congressmen have agreed to work together to persuade the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee to inaugurate hearings on the two bills at the outset of the next session. It is felt in some quarters that this issue has been discussed so extensively and has been made the subject of such extensive hearings in committees of Congress and before the Federal Trade Commission that it should be possible to report out a bill without further public hearings. That idea is vetoed by the forces in opposition to resale price legislation. There has been a steady decrease in the opposition in retail circles to price-fixing by publishers and manufacturers. The misgivings of small, independent retailers have been all but allayed; the antagonism of the large mail-order houses is less manifest; and an organization that had, as its avowed purpose, the frustration of price maintenance, has apparently disintegrated. But there persists a remnant of department store opposition, instigated by certain interests in New York for which the book-trade has little love. The bitter-enders have let it be known at Washington that if any price standardization bill is to be considered in Congressional committee they will demand the right to be heard.

Public hearings, on the two bills, would be welcomed by proponents as the government's preference would be placed on record. The chief difference is that the Kelly Bill places the operation under the supervision of a governmental agency whereas the Merritt version makes no provision for this paternalism.

Representative Kelly stands pat for governmental scrutiny of "fixed" prices and the reasonableness of restricted or placarded prices. He personally wrote Section 3 of the bill,—as an addition to the original bill which was written by Justice Brandeis—in order to carry out the ideas of the Federal Trade Commission, but he feels that no bill will be "workable" that does not arrange for the filing at Washington of the schedule of prices and revisions of prices. He realizes that there is in Congress considerable antagonism to the Trade Commission, and he would be content to substitute the Department of Commerce or any other acceptable governmental agency as a reviewing authority to pass on the fairness of prices, if there should be complaint by either a dealer or a consumer.

Secretary Hoover and his aids have been represented as feeling that there is no need for governmental censorship of uniform prices and that to insist upon it is merely to extend the meddling of the government in business. But Secretary Hoover has not publicly gone on record on this issue. The Department of Commerce executive who was instrumental in bringing the matter to an issue was one of the "volunteers" from the field of big business who is no longer connected with the Department. Four or five different bills were drafted by interested persons in the effort to devise one that the Department of Commerce would endorse and support.

Supporters of the Merritt Bill and the Kelly Bill agree that the Federal Trade Commission will not approve any bill that does not provide for governmental supervision of restricted prices, terms of settlement, etc. Supporters of the Merritt Bill conjecture that a majority of the members of the Trade Commission might declare for the principle of price standardization, but not more than one or two could be counted upon to endorse the Merritt Bill. Commissioner Murdock, to whom is attributed the authorship of the Trade Commission's historic endorsement of resale price fixing, some four or five years ago, is the only signer of that endorsement who continues on the Trade Commission.

Several members of the book-trade have recently inquired whether it would not be advisable to have introduced in the Senate counterparts of the Merritt and Kelly Bills so that there might be simultaneous consideration. The leaders of the movement feel that this legislation should originate in the House of Representatives. Furthermore they say that a canvass of sentiment in the Senate has been made and that they are absolutely confident that votes are available in the Senate to pass promptly any price standardization measure upon which the House will take favorable action.

A Large English Circulating Library

"BOOTHS Book-lovers' Library" is one of the largest circulating libraries in England. It has more than 265 branches situated thruout England and Scotland. Various types of membership are offered and the service rendered in each is fully described in a booklet issued by the Library.

Based on the belief that many of the details of management found to be successful by this English firm may be helpful and instructive to a large number of booksellers in this country the most interesting terms and conditions specified in the booklet are printed at considerable length below.

"None of the subscriptions quoted include the collection or delivery of books. . ."

"The terms quoted are for volumes and not for works."

"Quarterly subscriptions, at expiration, may be converted into annual subscriptions upon payment of the balance of the annual subscription."

"Books are not lent to non-subscribers."

"The 'On Demand' Subscription"

"Entitling subscribers, upon demand, to all books in circulation, and in print, including all the most recently published volumes, and to exchange at any Library Branch in London or Provinces, without previous notice."

"Subscribers under these terms are definitely assured that each and every volume ordered (up to the limit of number subscribed for) will immediately be dispatched to any Library Branch. Subscribers may select, in the first parcel leaving the Head Depot, London, after the receipt of the order at Head Offices. Parcels leave the London Warehouse for all branches at least twice a week."

"Orders may be handed in to any of our Librarians, or if desired, may be sent direct to the Head Librarian, London."

"A special privilege of Transfers is designed to accomodate subscribers whilst temporarily absent from permanent residence."

"Subscribers are invited to exchange their books as often as desired, the successful working of any library being only possible when its books are freely circulated. This applies to all books, but particularly to the newest or popular books of the day, and to magazines. Therefore subscribers are asked to assist the management by the Speedy Return of all New Books."

"All volumes issued in connection with subscription for six volumes and over, under "O. D.," "A. T.," or "A" terms, must be presented for exchange at least once during each month."

"Regulations made in the interest of all subscribers."

"You may become a subscriber at any time."

"It is essential that books brought in for exchange should be handed at once to the Librarian for cancellation, the fresh selection being also given to the Librarian for the purpose of record."

"Membership tokens must in ALL instances be presented when an exchange is made."

"Metal shields are in all cases considered the equivalent of volumes, and must be presented when a volume is required in exchange. In the event of a shield being lost a charge of 6d. is made."

"When a subscriber loses a book the Library must be compensated for its loss."

"When books are known or suspected of having been in infected areas they are immediately destroyed by fire and the cost of replacing them is shared by the Management and the subscriber."

"Any book that is in print, is suitable for circulation, and in general demand, will be obtained for subscribers."

"The Management reserves the right either to withhold from circulation, or in case of books already in circulation, to withdraw any book for whatever cause it may think desirable."

"It is always desirable that order cards should contain the titles of at least three times the number of volumes wanted."

"Exchange of books by means of the 'Parcel Post' or 'Rail' should be maintained direct with the Head Depot."

"When books are exchanged thru the medium of the 'Parcels Post or Rail,' a sum (say 10/-) must be deposited at 29 Farringdon Road, to cover the cost of postages incurred. A detailed statement of expenditure under this heading will be furnished when the deposit is nearing exhaustion, or at any time if demanded."

"Assistants are permitted to file subscribers' book lists for reference, but under no circumstances can preferential treatment be given to them."

"Membership Tokens and Shields are the property of the Library, and must be surrendered when the subscription, in respect of which they were issued, has expired."

"Copies of almost every book of general interest are added immediately on publication. We do not, however, undertake to supply Medical, Technical or Foreign publications, sumptuously illustrated volumes, pamphlets, guide books or paper bound books."

"A list of the most recent publications is published at frequent intervals entitled "Periodical Guide" which may be obtained at all library branches."

"Branches of the Library are established in most of the important towns in England; London, Manchester, Liverpool, Birmingham, and other great centres being covered by numerous sub-branches. As circumstances permit additions will be made."

The Clean Book League

The Views of its Defenders and Critics

THE effort of Justice John Ford of the New York Supreme Court to revise the law for censoring books has taken the form of establishing what calls itself "The Clean Book League," the first organized meeting being held on March 8th. Justice Ford's description of what this League shall do is that there should be a committee of readers who would be responsible for reports on current books, and these reports should be expected to give the public an idea of the books to be avoided.

The plan has brought practically unanimous opposition from the columns of the daily press. Some criticisms suggest that such a voluntary board would be difficult to organize and that the public would not accept the opinions of any such board as a guidance to reading. Some suggest that the board itself might suffer from its task, but Justice Ford has forestalled this by stating that the members should be all people of broad reading, and, as he expressed it, "hardened sinners."

Dr. Charles K. Gilbert, who represented Bishop Manning at the meeting, was elected Secretary, after Justice Ford had been elected to preside. John S. Sumner, Assistant District Attorney John C. Myers and A. P. Atterbury were appointed to make a final draft of the proposed amendment. Among the organizations represented were the Boy Scouts, the New York Federation of Churches, the Salvation Army, the Catholic Club, the Knights of Columbus, the Y. M. C. A., the New York Society for the Suppression of Vice, the Lord's Day Alliance and the Social Service Commission of the Episcopal Church.

Chief City Magistrate McAdoo, in a letter recently made public, commended Justice Ford for the organization of the Clean Books League but pointed out some of the many obstacles which confront anyone who attempts to introduce literary reforms. Magistrate McAdoo said that he had learned the hopelessness of such reform by "long and painful experience." He has known of obscure and unpopular books which have suddenly leaped into the best-seller class by injudicious prosecution. Magistrate McAdoo said in his letter:

"I have had a long and painful experience as a Police Commissioner and a Magistrate dealing with indecent and immoral plays and books. In my opinion the law has broken down in effectively dealing with such matters.

"This break-down, in my judgment, is not because there is an insufficiency of statutory law, but by reason of the decisions of the reviewing courts. The second rule with reference to testimony in these cases was laid down in the case of People vs. Muller (1884-06, N. Y.), that whether a book or play is indecent, immoral or obscene is to be determined by their reaction on the ordinary citizen, the every-day man and woman of average intelligence, and having regard to what is conventionally considered decent and moral. In that case, as you know, the Court ruled that the evidence of artists, professional writers and all others having a personal or pecuniary interest in the productions of plays, paintings and books, was incompetent.

"The objection will possibly be raised against this rule that the law should also exclude the evidence of those who deal, as it were, professionally with morals. I am quite sure, for instance, that a court or jury would be much more impressed by the evidence of a disinterested and obviously impartial citizen acting on individual initiative as to whether a book or a play was indecent, immoral or obscene as against that of even Mr. Sumner, excellent and conscientious man as he is.

"Please understand I am not criticising Mr. Sumner, altho I think his judgment, as I wrote him, was not good in resurrecting old and somewhat classical works erotogenic in character and which were found only in the libraries of certain types of men who were willing to pay a high price for them.

"Recently, after certain of these books received a great advertising in the courts, I read several catalogs in which the price has gone down from $50 to $5, and they are being more widely circulated than probably ever in their whole history.

"I have become so convinced of the ineffectuality of the proceedings under the law and the circumstantial environment that I have given it up as hopeless, under existing circumstances, to punish these people who write or produce these plays and books that make, and are intended to make, an appeal to base and lascivious minds and to bring marriage and married life into ridicule and contempt.

"If you attack a play or a book now you only advertise it for the class of people who want just that sort of thing. In the last few days I was asked to begin what would have turned out to be a long dilatory proceeding against a play, and I am convinced that the theater people themselves were behind the movement to advertise their thoro nasty, rotten production.

"The only way to deal with the play which comes under the statute is to issue a warrant.

If the complaint justifies it, and then have the police do their duty in closing the theater, treating it as a common nuisance.

"On one occasion where I agreed to look at a play before taking final action, the management pointed to the audience which packed the house to the roof as a vindication of the play itself. I said to him, 'Why if you make it a little more indecent, you would have to roof Central Park to hold the sort of people who crave such spiced and poisonous so-called amusements.' But this is too big a subject for a letter.

"The trouble now is that individual citizens will not come forward, complain to the Police Department, if necessary go into court as a public duty, and give evidence against these people."

Best Sellers During February from Books of the Month

THE best selling records for February, which have just been compiled from the returns over the country, show that the 1923 publications have picked up speed rapidly, and three titles of quite different characteristics are brought to the top. "The Wanderer of the Wasteland" was in first place for January, and "The Dim Lantern" advanced rapidly from fifteenth place to second on the list. "Black Oxen" is also a 1923 book which has quickly reached a rapid sale. Among other new conspicuous titles are "The Enchanted April" and "Man's Country." This shows that in the second month of the year half of the first twelve are 1923 publications and half hold over from a previous season. This holding over has been considered a healthy sign for authors, publishers and booksellers. Health and history still maintain their predominant interest in the non-fiction list, and behavior, treated both seriously and flippantly, has caught the public's attention.

Mileage Books May 1st

MILEAGE books with a 20% reduction for 2,500 miles go on sale on May 1st, according to the latest announcement of the Interstate Commerce Commission. Eastern railroads have been contesting the decision to have such mileage books sold, and the date of putting them on sale has been moved forward from March 15th, in order to give the railroads time to put them on sale.

Purchasers will have to have their autographed photographs pasted on the covers of mileage books, a ruling intended to prevent scalping. The Commission ruled out the request of the Commercial Travelers' organizations that coupons and mileage books should be made available by paying excess baggage charges. The price of the books will be $72, while the standard fare would be $90 for 2,500 miles.

Extra copies of the Spring Announcement Number (March 10) will be supplied at 15 cents. Order them early for your salesforce.

The PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY.

Women Booksellers Meet

THE annual banquet of the Women's National Book Association proved to be the high-water mark of their gatherings. Well over 300 people sat down in the Winter Garden of the McAlpin Hotel, on the evening of March 8, the tables filling the room, with 20 places at the head table. Marian Cutter of the Children's Bookshop, president of the organization, presided.

The principal address of the evening was made by S. K. Ratcliffe, well-known correspondent of the Manchester Guardian and popular platform lecturer. His observations on bookselling problems in this country were not only keenly interesting but most delightfully presented, and the audience listened with greatest interest. He made strong pleas for further popularization of book reading, and emphasized the need of keeping the interest of the average reader in mind in book reviewing, book advertising and bookselling.

Anne Parrish Corliss made a graceful and witty speech in her first appearance before a bookselling audience. Mrs. Corliss is the sister of Maxfield Parrish and the author of "A Pocketful of Poses," published by Doran.

Eleanor Davis played and sang a song in honor of the Association which she had composed for the occasion.

Eugene Lockhart introduced as "The funniest man in New York," succeeded in making good his reputation by giving a burlesque on the musical shows, illustrating with a specimen libretto accompanied by himself on the piano.

A take off on puppeteering had been arranged by Ethel Peyser assisted by Madge Jenison and Belle M. Walker, an imitation puppet show entitled "Stringing the Author." Tony Sarg made an admirable showman, and introduced two skits, in which the author of "This Freedom" held converse with his character and the author of "Main Street" discoursed in rapid puns with "Carol."

Souvenirs for the party were given by Geo. H. Doran Co., Doubleday, Page Co., Cosmopolitan Book Co., Houghton Mifflin Co., Reilly & Lee, Alfred A. Knopf, Inc., George W. Jacobs & Co.

"Back to the Bible"

AN organization entitled "Back to the Bible Bureau" has its headquarters in Cincinnati, and is soliciting funds from philanthropic people to enable it to carry on the sending out of Bible quotations for newspaper use. It claims that over 2,000 newspaper publishers with circulations of 14,000,000 are using these daily Bible quotations, and that for a cent a day the message can be sent out to 4,000 people.

Religious Book Lists

REV. GAIUS GLENN ATKINS, pastor of the First Congregational Church of Detroit, author of "The Godward Side of Life," Pilgrim Press; "Maze of the Nations and the Way Out," Revell; "Pilgrims of the Lonely Road," Revell; "Jerusalem Past and Present," Revell; "The Undiscovered Country," Revell, etc., prepared two lists of religious books which he considers a well rounded approach to the application of Christianity to life, for the Book Review Section of The Detroit Free Press for Religious Book Week.

The first list is an intellectual approach rather than devotional:

"The Life of Jesus of Nazareth" by Rhees
 "The Growth of Christianity" by Gardner.
 "A History of the Christian Church" by Walker.

"The Evolution of Religion" by Caird.
 "The Right to Believe" by Howland.
 "A Faith That Enquires" by Jones.
 "Through Science To Faith" by Smythe.
 "Jesus Christ and the Social Question" by Peabody.

"The Essence of Religion" by Bowne.
 "The Meaning of God in Human Experience" by Hocking.

The second list prepared by Dr. Atkins is devotional in its approach rather than intellectual:

"The Bible."
 "Pilgrim's Progress" by Bunyan.
 "Imitation of Christ" by Thomas à Kempis.
 "The Meditations of Marcus Aurelius."
 "In Memoriam" by Tennyson.
 "Our City of God" by Brierly.
 "Thy Rod and Thy staff" by A. C. Benson.
 "Anthology of the World's Great Religious Poetry" by Hill.

"Ideal of Jesus" by Clarke.
 "Seven Lamps of Architecture" by Ruskin.

Supporting a Hotel Library

THE guest at Ottawa's beautiful hotel, Chateau Laurier, finds on his table a booklist showing a well assorted library of fiction and standard reference books, and on the back of this booklist is the information that this library was made possible by the enterprise and liberality of a score of firms, one each in the principal kinds of business, whose names are printed on the back. This is a new form of promotion for local business, and it not only puts good books in the hotel but provides a brief key to the important stores of the town, so that the donators of the books get full advertising value. The well-known bookstore of James Hope & Sons, Ltd., is among the dealers listed.

Little Talks With the Sales Force

By James Lackington, Jr.

XX THE CLERK'S READING

MR. Brown took his little black notebook from his pocket and gave it a momentary glance. It had become a habit. He already knew the subject of the meeting before him very well.

"We had a very interesting roll-call last week, and you remember that I told you we would have another this week, each one responding by describing the book he or she has been reading within the past week. Let's go. Miss Temple."

"I've been reading Temple Bailey's new book 'The Dim Lantern,'" said Miss Temple. "It's a real good story, too, better I think than 'The Tin Soldier' or 'The Trumpeter Swan.' Of course, it is very light, but I do find it entertaining. Temple Bailey has a style very much her own; and she knows how to give intimate little touches that greatly please the reader."

"Thank you, Miss Temple. I hope that others of us, all if possible, will read 'The Dim Lantern' because it has shown possibilities of a great sale, and the way to be able to sell a book is to read it," said Mr. Brown. "By the way, let's have a show of hands—how many have read it?"

Every hand went up except Gordon's and young George Flemming's. Mr. Shoemaker's advance copies had been put to good use apparently.

"I loaned mine to a young lady," said Gordon, while Miss Temple gave him an odd look, "but if she ever returns it, I'll look it over."

"Miss Porter."

"I have been reading 'The Enchanted April,'" replied Miss Porter, "and I like it so well that I'm selling copies every day. I always have liked 'Elizabeth' and I think 'Enchanted April' is the best thing she has written in a long time. It's light, but so charming."

"If you talk to a customer that way," said

Mr. Brown, "I don't wonder that you sell it." "Miss Lister."

"Well, I've been reading the new Oppenheim book," said Miss Lister. "He's written about forty books, and I guess I've read every one of them. 'The Seven Conundrums' is a very ingenious story, all about three people, two men and a woman, concert singers, who sold their souls to a stranger for a year. Why they did it and what happened to them make the plot, and it is simply fascinating. I know there isn't anything highbrow about reading Oppenheim, but I like him just the same."

"Apparently most of us do," said Mr. Brown. "I had to re-order 'The Seven Conundrums' yesterday."

"Miss Belleville."

"I've been reading 'Pointed Tower' by Vance Thompson," said Miss Belleville. "I don't care so much for detective stories, but I do think this is an exceptionally good one. So many mystery writers have no style, and their little plots don't amount to much, but I liked this story immensely. It certainly keeps you guessing right up to the end."

"By the way," said Mr. Brown, "what famous book did Vance Thompson write?"

"Ask Miss Temple," suggested Gordon. Miss Temple was pleasantly plump.

"Why me?" She said indignantly.

"I know she used it," said Gordon. "I took her to lunch once, and she ate a piece of lettuce and a baked apple."

"Once?" asked several in skeptical tones.

"Yes," said Mr. Brown, "as you can surmise from Gordon's persiflage, Vance Thompson was the author of 'Eat and Grow Thin.' I guess I'll never have any need of it," he added, glancing down at his angular form.

"I don't know," said Gordon, reminiscently, "I remember a man even thinner than you" (Mr. Brown smiled at the unthinking dig)

THE CLERKS HAD READ THE BOOKS AND SO WERE VERY CONFIDENT IN THEIR RECOMMENDATIONS

"who asked for a copy once. I said to him, 'for a friend?' He replied, 'no, for myself.' 'But surely you don't need it?' 'Oh yes I do, I'm going to eat everything it tells me not to,' he said. Pretty good idea, too." This was one of Gordon's favorite stories but classed by the members of the force as having an entirely imaginary basis.

"Miss Freeman."

"Well, I've been reading Barrie's play 'Dear Brutus.' You know it has just come out in book form, tho it has been a number of years since William Gillette appeared in it. I enjoyed it so much then that I wanted to read it. Besides Barrie always puts a lot of quaint explanations into his plays. I've sold three copies of it this week."

"Good," said Mr. Brown. "I'm going to ask that, within the next two weeks, every one of us read one book other than fiction. I may or may not call for a report, but I will at least check you up on it. We must make our knowledge of books varied. Now, Gordon, what have you been reading?"

Gordon assumed a very serious air and said, "I have been reading 'The Effect of Reaction on the Flaxation of Nitrogen' by Azotobacter—a learned work."

"Come, Gordon, cut out the comedy. Our time is getting short," said Mr. Brown.

"When I tell you what I have been reading, you'll laugh," said Gordon. "'David Harum.' You know that's one of the books we assume that everybody has read. Well, the new anniversary edition reminded me that I had never read it and I want to tell you folks that it is a great mistake to take it for granted that everybody has. Why, a whole generation of readers has grown up since 'David Harum' was published. The reason I didn't read it was that I was probably trying to tear up one of these guaranteed untearable linen books at that time. So were a lot of others, and everyone of them—or us—is a prospect for 'David Harum,' one of the most humorous and most American books you can possibly find."

A census proved that only Mr. Brown had ever read "David Harum" which certainly seemed to prove Mr. Gordon's contention.

"I think that about completes our circle," Mr. Brown observed.

"No, indeed it doesn't," said Gordon. "We still have to hear from Mr. Brown."

"That's so," agreed Mr. Brown. "I am perfectly willing to respond to the roll call. I read the new Oppenheim book, too, but we won't count that. What I have been giving more attention to this past week than anything else is Harold Whitehead's book entitled, 'How to Run a Store.' That is one thing I'm always trying to find out and I think he can be of a lot of help to me. I've found so many good things in his book already that I have in mind a series of meetings about business fundamentals that we all need to know about and yet which may be very hazy in the minds of all of us. I believe that those in the firing line should understand the plans and the problems of those in command. Mr. Partland thoroly agrees with me and, as I can get these topics ready, we'll work them in at the various meetings.

"Now our roll call has taken so long that we can't take up any other topic tonight, but I feel that it has been very much worth while and I am going to use it again sometime—probably without advance notice.

"Now, Miss Freeman, let me take a copy of 'Dear Brutus' home with me tonight and we can compare notes on it. I think that will be all.

"Goodnight."

Copyright in the Philippines

A COMPLETE copyright code was introduced into the Philippine Legislature during the past session, and this code embodied manufacturing sections, which would have made it absolutely necessary for every piece of copyright matter to be set up and printed in the Islands. As the Islands are without equipment for handling book production, this would have been a most serious matter, especially for publishers of textbooks, who have the largest book outlet in that country. The Bureau of Copyright of the National Association of Book Publishers has been active in presenting the publishers' situation to the interested people at Manila, and the Legislature has now adjourned without any action.

New Remainder Method

PUBLISHERS who have always been seriously concerned as to finding new outlets for their remainder editions may find a suggestion, if the plan is not overworked, in the report that has just reached New York of the new market developed for "Four Years in Germany." The publisher found a new remainder market for some of these, but did not realize until afterwards that this tall izmo, when hollowed out, would just hold a pint flask. This enabled a person to carry with impunity this small quota of liquor without being questioned.

It may be that other izmos would be too small for this purpose, but it is reported that excise officials are beginning to watch for further appearance of "Four Years in Germany."

A Tool for the Handlers of Books

BOOKSELLERS and publishers as well as librarians will welcome the new edition of the American Library Association's "Guide to Reference Books." It is an enlargement of the well-known Kroeger's "Guide to Reference Books," which had been previously thru three editions. The revision is by Isadore Gilbert Mudge, Reference Librarian of Columbia University. The book classifies and analyzes all types of reference books and makes it possible to judge what are the best books in different fields and to select for a reference library the material that will be most useful and valuable.

The bookstore will find it a valuable key to the best books for the store's own reference library, and can also obtain from it assistance in recommending authoritative reference books to customers. The chapter on encyclopedias, for instance, gives suggestions as to the method of estimating the standing of a set: first, its authority; next, its arrangement; next, the value of its bibliographies. The chapter on dictionaries gives valuable material about the different works, their methods of arrangement and the characteristics of their editing. There are lists of the best foreign dictionaries, concordances and Bible dictionaries, almanacs, etc. There are chapters that give the best sources of data on fine arts and on the useful arts, with regard to early printed books of foreign literature.

The whole volume is carefully indexed, so that special books can be readily traced. One appendix of interest is a suggestive list of 100 reference books, intended for the guidance of the smaller public library, which, because of limited funds, finds the question of selection more difficult.

This list puts the books in order of purchase, starting with the dictionary, encyclopedia, atlas, etc. From this list of 100 the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY suggests the following list of 20 books which would be probably the most valuable for a bookstore reference shelf, if the store wishes to have at hand all possible sources of reference.

Such a list might read as follows:

1. United States Catalog of Books, and Supplements
2. Publishers' Trade List Annual
3. New International Encyclopedia
4. Dictionary (Webster's International or Standard)
5. World Almanac
6. Who's Who in America
7. Who's Who
8. Granger's Index to Poetry and Recitations
9. Hoyt's Cyclopedia of Practical Quotations

10. Bible (Riverside parallel or any other edition)
11. Stevenson's Home Book of Verse
12. Cambridge History of English Literature
13. Cambridge History of American Literature
14. Children's Catalog and Supplements
15. Baker's Guide to the Best Fiction
16. Baker's Guide to Historical Fiction
17. Sonnenschein's Best Books
18. Eastman's Index to Fairy Tales
19. Firkin's Index to Short Stories
20. U. S. Document Office's Documents

Churches Active in Religious Book Week

REPORTS and clippings that are flowing into the headquarters of the Year Round Bookselling Campaign indicate that many communities are feeling the pulse of this effort. Many interesting articles are appearing in the religious press. The editorial mention of the Week in the newspapers has been very generous and inspiring, and the churches have evidently become more used to finding methods to cooperate in the movement.

A newspaper in New Brunswick, N. J., tells of cooperation between the Public Library and W. R. Read's store in a special display, while a minister preached a sermon on "The Best Book of the Year."

The Buffalo Public Library has placed on a special shelf for the rest of the month a collection of books of prayer and meditation, among which are two books by Buffalo clergymen.

A report from the Bangor Public Library shows that it had a special exhibit emphasizing not only religious books but also religious magazines.

In the church program of the Brick Presbyterian Church in Orange, one finds the inquiry addressed by the pastor to the congregation, "Two months of the year have passed. Have you read a religious book?"

In the field of retail newspaper advertisements, those of John Wanamaker's and Macy's book department, New York, have stood out conspicuously.

Paper Prices Advance

ALL book publishers are getting notices from their paper dealers that book stock is advancing in price. The current reports from the mills are that there has been an advance of from $5 to $10 a ton since January 1st. This advance follows advances in binding cost and presswork cost.

Vote for Delegates to France Book-trade and Library Presents Candidates

THERE is an opportunity and a responsibility resting on the book-trade and library profession to see that delegates from these two fields are included in the party that goes to France this spring as a Good Will Delegation under the auspices of the American Committee for Devastated France. This great work has gone on steadily for five years, and it is one of the works of reconstruction that no one would wish to have retarded or held back by lack of public interest.

As a means of keeping this interest steadily alive, the American Committee has devised a very interesting plan of promotion, which provides that, by means of votes, different communities scattered thru the country shall elect delegates to go to France to see the country and its condition and thereby to bring back into our country broadened knowledge of the situation.

The plan provides for Good Will elections, with votes at 10 cents apiece, and there will be one delegate for every 100,000 votes cast or every 60,000 thereafter, the overplus of the highest candidates helping to bring up those just below until there are as many delegates to France as there are multiples of 60,000 in the grand total. This system makes it entirely possible to look forward to having delegates from the book-trade and library profession in the party.

There are two candidates in the contest that is being conducted in Greater New York who deserve the support of all those who are interested in books. One is Jean Lawler of Brentano's, who is known to many as the manager of its very comprehensive department of poetry. The other is Molly V. Leavitt, head of welfare work in the New York Public Library. Subscriptions to help the election of either of these candidates should be sent to Mr. Mecklin of Brentano's or Miss Uhlrich at the Library. Altho this particular contest is for Greater New York, contributions to the cause can be received from any part of the country, and undoubtedly all book interested people will be glad to help secure votes for these delegates.

Since this great work for France started, there has been, of course, a subsidence of the number of appeals made to the American people, but it is to be hoped that their interest in this cause, which represents the gratitude that we feel for those who suffered five years for us, will continue to find expression. A real importance attaches to the emphasizing of the need of a delegate from the book field.

owing to the fact that one of the five lines of activity undertaken by the American Committee in the Devastated Area has been the putting of books to work there. During the rehabilitation of the villages, there was a direct demand from the people that there should be books and opportunity for reading. This demand was promptly met, and reading rooms have been established whose conduct and success have given fine testimony to the enthusiasm and ability of those from America who organized the work and who trained French people to carry it on. These two delegates could bring back to this country a new feeling of contact with this important undertaking. It is hoped by those who are undertaking this campaign that people will not wait for solicitation but will mail money to these addresses, which will be carefully credited thru the bank of deposit, and the result will be known by April 17th.

U. S. Magazines Attacked in Canada

THE House of Commons at Ottawa passed on March 5th a resolution, presented by H. C. Hocken, conservative member for West Toronto, reading:

"It is desirable that measures should be adopted to encourage the publication of Canadian magazines and periodicals."

An amendment which would have suggested that this encouragement take the form of putting paper, type, ink, etc., on the free list was lost. The proposer of the resolution believes that the best method of thus encouraging Canadian magazines would be to put an import duty of 15 cents a pound on advertising sections of American magazines. He explained that this would cause the Saturday Evening Post to pay $7,000 an issue. In the case of a magazine carrying little or no advertising, it was suggested that there be a tax of 10 cents per pound on the weight of the whole magazine.

The arguments against American magazines were that they were trashy, anti-British and anti-Canadian, and that by featuring business opportunities in the United States they encouraged emigration from Canada. They also felt that local magazines would encourage local writing.

The Minister of Finance, speaking for the Government, favored the sentiment of the resolution. Also, Hon. Arthur Meighen, leader of the opposition, favored the plan. It was stated that for every Canadian periodical there are four American magazines sold in Canada, and that the importations had quadrupled in ten years.

Criticism and Praise of Year-Round Bookselling

AN editorial writer in the San Francisco Argonaut of January 20th finds material for some philosophizing and a good deal of comment, favorable and otherwise, in the activities of the National Association of Book Publishers in its Year-Round Bookselling Plan. It is an interesting criticism, whether we agree or not, so we have reprinted it in full.

"If the English have come down in history as a nation of shopkeepers, Americans may surely follow suit as a nation of business co-operators; for added to the Anglo-Saxon instinct to trade we have what amounts in our national character to a Dutch passion for organization, economy, and thrift. Organization is the order of the day, and nothing emphasizes the prevailing system of co-operation more than the still youthful scheme of the National Association of Book Publishers called the Year-Round Bookselling Plan, a name that has not our hearty endorsement since it smacks too much of blatant publicity. The worthiness of the venture deserves either a more dignified or a snappier title. The plan itself is a piece of monumental and daring business, being no less than a system of making of the profession of the once dilettante bookseller a prosperous, not to say rushing, business. Incidentally, of course, the public is being educated and authors housed and fed, but greatest credit should be given to the view seen from the angle of the booksellers, men who have formerly had to renounce worldly ambition upon entering this career in much the same fashion as a religious sacrificing all to his vocation. But tho the bookseller still may be at heart a connoisseur reveling in his printed and bound possessions, the publisher of today is not so æsthetic a being. Taking a leaf from trade unionism or trust corporations—we do not precisely know which—he has made use of the great national contribution to civilization, publicity. And since he is dependent on the bookseller, has made that usually unbusinesslike person also profit by it. The result has been the forementioned scheme with the candid name. The Year-Round Bookselling Plan is the institution back of the now familiar Religious Book Week in Lent and Children's Book Week in November. The program for the present year provides a general subject for each calendar month suitable to the season. This bright child of the National Association of Book Publishers was born in 1920. In that year a group of publishers decided to extend to a year-round campaign the tactics already applied to two successive and successful children's book weeks. Thus was invented a machine for making bookselling a paying business.

"But we have perhaps been emphasizing the business—that is to say the dramatic angle of the unique institution. The obverse of the medal is the encouragement for the founding and promoting of home libraries, immense extensions in public, club, and church libraries, and the stimulation of good reading everywhere. If every wholesale organization of business bore as beneficent fruit, the unorganized public would have nothing to complain of. We wish long life to the Year-Round Bookselling Plan, a rechristening with a better name, and that its sponsors may not stifle it with over-commercialism."

A New New York Bookshop

A FEW doors from Fifth Avenue, at 4 West Forty-Third Street, is the latest addition to the artistic and interesting bookshops that have grown up in New York in recent years. This is the Harcourt, Brace Bookshop, which will be in charge of Rubie Ley, formerly in library service and late manager of the Liberty Tower Bookshop of the Doubleday, Page chain. Associated with her in the managing of the shop is Alice Doyé, formerly connected with the Doubleday, Page Bookshop in the Pennsylvania Terminal. These managers will have complete charge of the sales policy, and the books of all publishers will be given the same footing as if the managers were buying for an independent organization, tho the management will have the continuous advice of the experienced men of the publishing office.

The shop is a most interesting example of how a personal atmosphere can be developed in a small shop. The size is 20 x 20 feet. The finish is in mottled gray. There are two windows, separated only by a low railing from the open store, so that the whole shop is conspicuous and attractive from the street. Shelves go up 8 feet, and in the center of one side is a section with glass front, which will contain the leather bound books, and on the opposite side is an open panel for posters and display material. The lighting arrangement is unusual and effective, all coming from a strong reflector, which rises above a small central display table. This powerful light goes to the ceiling and then strikes directly onto the shelves, bringing the bindings and wrappers into bright conspicuousness. There is space for four tables, and the stock has been classified to cover the major lines of interest, including children's books. There is a staircase to a basement of similar size, which will double the storage capacity of the establishment.

Harcourt, Brace to Move

THE interesting old building that has supplied such a suitable atmosphere for the new firm of Harcourt, Brace & Company during its first years, is soon to be torn down, and the firm has signed a long lease for a floor in the new building on Madison Avenue from 46th to 47th Street, number 383 Madison Avenue. They have taken the fifth floor, and will sub-lease part of it until such time as more room is needed. This building is separated from the 45th Street entrance of the Grand Central Station by the new Hotel Roosevelt, now in process of construction, and is directly opposite the Ritz-Carlton Hotel. This adds another to the list of important firms that have found new and apparently permanent quarters in recent months.

Booksellers' Convention Plans

THE annual convention of the American Booksellers' Association will be held in Detroit, May 14 to 17. The Hotel Statler will be the headquarters of the convention. The program is being prepared by a committee headed by Ward Macauley. The slogan of the convention is "For Better Book Selling." Speakers of merit will round out a full four-day program.

New Delivery Service to the Pacific

ONE of the very difficult problems in the distribution of books in America is the long distances between the publishing center of New York and important distributing districts of the west. This is particularly so in the case of San Francisco and Los Angeles, cities that are among the best book outlets that the country has.

Of the three methods of transportation, freight has been very often too slow, and expressage and postage too high. As the problem is of such fundamental importance to good distribution, the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY is glad to give space to the details that it has gathered with regard to a freight express service that seems to be giving a great deal of satisfaction to many lines of merchandise, and begun to be used by some of the western booksellers. Particulars about this were brought back to New York by Henry Hoyns, Vice-President of Harper & Brothers, who recently visited the Pacific Coast and who took special pains to study this fundamental problem.

The Acme Fast Freight Express Service delivers packages of less than 100 pounds weight in 12 days to Los Angeles and in 13 days to San Francisco, all by rail. The shipping is done from Pier 41, North River, New York, and publishers can get exact details by applying to their business office, 8 Bridge Street, New York. Packages are handled in a systematic manner with special Acme receipts, and all that are delivered up to four o'clock go forward on the same day. The Company keeps continuous trace of the cars, in order to be sure that the destination is reached on schedule.

The cost of such complete express service as compared to other methods is shown in this table:

Package Weighing (in pounds)	Express Charge N. Y. to L. A.	Express Charge N. Y. to S. F.	Acme Charge N. Y. to L. A. & S. F.
25	$3.67	$3.91	$1.54
50	6.99	7.48	2.93
75	10.32	11.05	4.31
100	13.65	14.62	5.70

The same shipping method can be used from Philadelphia or Boston by sending by express to New York.

Western booksellers desiring exact details about this service can obtain the folder by writing to the Secretary of the National Association of Book Publishers at 334 Fifth Avenue, New York.

A Plea for "Ten Point"

A WARNING that the extensive use of types smaller than ten point is becoming a serious factor in causing eye fatigue and impairment of vision is contained in a bulletin from the National Committee for the Prevention of Blindness, of which Hon. William H. Taft is honorary president. The statement says that,

"The use of type smaller than ten point not only has harmful effect on the eyesight of the reader, but often defeats its own purpose by repelling the potential reader who realizes that the reading of such type hurts or tires his eyes. The amount of money lost by advertisers and publishers thru waste circulation resulting from type faces difficult to read is probably greater than the cost of extra space and paper stock necessary if larger type were used.

"Particularly in the case of school books and other publications read by children is the use of small type harmful, the committee says. Reading matter intended for children of any age should never be printed in type smaller than 10-point. The type sizes recommended for children by the National Committee For The Prevention of Blindness follow:

For children 12 years of age, 10 point.

For children between 9 and 12 years, 12 point.

For children between 8 and 9 years, 14 point.

For children between 7 and 8 years, 18 point.

For children under 7 years, 24 to 30 point.

"The publishers of geography and history maps are among the most flagrant offenders in this respect, the committee reports. A special effort to induce publishers of school maps to use larger type will be made.

"A research recently conducted by the Department of Education of the State of Ohio showed that certain styles of 24 point type were more easily read by young children than other styles of 36 point type. The ultimate abolition of the use of all 6-point and smaller types of any styles is urged by the committee. Publishers, printers, and advertisers who have on hand large stocks of such small types are urged to use them only when their use is unavoidable, and to scrap such type at the earliest opportunity.

"As an indication of the growing appreciation of the effect of type sizes on eyesight, the National Committee For The Prevention of Blindness reports that at least two public libraries, at St. Louis, Mo., and Springfield, Mass., have set aside departments of 'Books for Tired Eyes' in which are included only books of 14 and 18 point type. These books are proving exceedingly popular with older people. Plans are also under way among Bible societies to publish the Book of Psalms in larger type for older readers."

THOUGHT TRANSFERENCE

A couple of high school principals were discussing various manifestations bordering on the occult.

"Is thought transference possible?" asked one.

"I fear not," answered the other.

Obituary Notes

STEPHEN FARRELLY

STEPHEN FARRELLY, General Manager and Vice President of the American News Company, died suddenly of heart trouble, after a brief illness, on March 9th, in his eighty-first year. He was born in Cavan, Ireland, 1843, coming to America with his parents in 1849. In early youth he entered the service of Dexter Brothers, news agents, in New York City, who afterwards were among the seven founders of the American News Company. Shortly after Dexter Brothers' merger with the American News Company, Mr. Farrelly went to Savannah, and undertook the management and winding up of the affairs of the firm of John W. Cooper & Co., whose business had been greatly affected by the war. Returning to New York in 1866, he founded the National News Company, which afterwards was amalgamated with the American News Company in 1868, he becoming at that time a member of the Board of Directors. Shortly afterwards he became Managing Director of the Central News Company, Philadelphia, a branch of the American News Company. He resided in Philadelphia until 1895. While there he was deeply interested in charitable and religious associations and civic clubs. In 1895 he came to New York as Manager of the home office, and upon the death of his brother, Patrick Farrelly, in 1904, he became General Manager and Vice President of the Company, which position he held until his death.

STEPHEN FARRELLY

Among his many activities, he was a member of and held important posts in the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick, the Roman Catholic Orphan Asylum, the Catholic Institute for the Blind, U. S. Catholic Historical Society, the Catholic Club and the American Irish Historical Society.

He is survived by four sons and three daughters. One of his sons, Richard, is in the periodical department of the Company, while one of his nephews, T. Charles Farrelly, is Secretary and another, S. V. Farrelly, is General Manager.

WALTER JACKSON DIES SUDDENLY

WALTER MONTGOMERY JACKSON, publisher with international interests, died suddenly at Gibraltar from heart failure on March 11th. He was on his way to his Madrid office. He was born in Newton Lower Falls, Mass. on September 10th, 1863. Entering early into business, he was, by the time he was twenty-two, a partner of the old firm of Estes & Lauriat. His enterprises thereafter extended rapidly, including his famous promotion of the new revisions of the "Encyclopedia Britannica" in partnership with Horace Hooper, who died last June. In 1909, he returned to the United States and devoted himself to the "Book of Knowledge" and other American interests. He established a chain of agencies thru Latin American countries. His career as a publisher, one of the most interesting and dramatic in book-trade annals, will be covered more fully in the next issue of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY. He leaves a widow, three sons and two daughters.

A PEN WOMEN'S BOOK SHOP

THE NEW YORK LEAGUE of American Pen Women is opening a bookshop at 10 East 58th Street thru the activity of its Book and Publishing Committee and Parker Miner, chairman. The occasion was celebrated by a special tea and reception at the Hotel McAlpin on March 8th. This Committee also conducts monthly book review luncheons, which have been widely attended.

BRANCH SHOPS IN FLORIDA

MISS NATALIE NEWELL, proprietor of the Studio Bookshop in Miami, has changed the name of this successful business to "Community Bookshop Number 1." The business has been incorporated, and it is Miss Newell's intention to open branches in other places on the Coast, thereby building up a systematic, co-operative effort along the line of her original success.

The Weekly Record of New Publications

THIS list aims to be a complete and accurate record of American book publications. Pamphlets will be included only if of special value. Publishers should send copies of all books promptly for annotation and entry, and the receipt of advance copies insures record simultaneous with publication. The annotations are descriptive, not critical; intended to place not to judge the books. Pamphlet material and books of lesser trade interest are listed in smaller type.

The entry is transcribed from title page when the book is sent for record. Prices are added except when not supplied by publisher or obtainable only on specific request. When not specified the binding is cloth.

Imprint date is stated [or best available date, preferably copyright date, in bracket] only when it differs from year of entry. Copyright date is stated only when it differs from imprint date; otherwise simply "c." No ascertainable date is designated thus: [n. d.]

Sizes are indicated as follows: F. (folio: over 30 centimeters high); Q. (4to: under 30 cm.); O. (8vo: 25 cm.); D. (12mo: 20cm.); S. (16mo: 17½ cm.); T. (24mo: 15 cm.); Tf. (32mo: 12½ cm.); Ff. (48mo: 10cm.); sq., obl., nar., designate square, oblong, narrow.

Titles beginning with an unimportant word are inverted to be listed under their subject when possible.

Rare Books, Autographs and Prints

THE private library of the late Lord Northcliffe has been bought by Charles J. Sawyer, the London rare book dealer, who has already issued a catalog of many of its treasures.

The architect's plaster model of Louvain Library, for restoration of which as America's war memorial in Belgium a $1,000,000 fund is being raised, is now on exhibit in the entrance vestibule of the New York Public Library.

A collection of the etchings and dry points made by Childe Hassam may be seen at the Keppel gallery. The yearly salon of American etchers is being held at the Brown-Robertson gallery. It offers recent work by Frank W. Benson, Arthur B. Davies, Childe Hassam, Anne Goldwaite, Mahonri Young, Ernest D. Roth, Troy Kinney, Earl Horter and others.

"Dr. Johnson, A Play" by A. Edward Newton, author of "The Amenities of Book Collecting" is announced for publication this spring. Mr. Newton says his cast consists of "the greatest actor that England ever produced, as well as some of her greatest men; authors, artists, dramatists and statesmen, grand ladies and women of the town included. Set your expectations high; they will not be disappointed."

R. Cobden-Sanderson of London has in preparation an edition of the poems of Charles Cotton, 1630-87, the friend of Izaak Walton, edited with an Introduction and Notes by John Beresford. This will be the first complete and separate edition of the shorter poems of Charles Cotton since the original publication of "Poems on Several Occasions" in 1689. The edition now in preparation will also include a number of Cotton's poems collected for the first time from various sources.

Professor P. E. Lewberry of London who has been in close touch with all of the discoveries made at Thebes since 1895, has just completed a book on "The Valley of the Tombs of the Kings," which will be published at an early date. It was Professor Newberry, who, with Lord Northampton and Dr. Spiegelberg, discovered the tomb of King Sebekemsaf in 1898. Together with Howard Carter he wrote the official account of the tomb of Thutmose IV, and he was living in the necropolis at Thebes when M. Loret discovered the tombs of Thutmose I, Thutmose II, and Amentotep II. Antiquarians will look forward to this volume with keen interest.

The farm of Ellisland, on the River Nith, near Dumfries, is hallowed ground to all lovers of Robert Burns. It was there that Burns resided from 1788 to 1791, as a farmer. The farm was purchased some years ago by George Williamson, an Edinburgh devotee and collector of Burns, and he has handed the farm over to Dumfries to become the property of the Scottish nation, and to be used for all time as a center of Burns interests and relics. The farm buildings as far as possible are to remain as they were in the time when they were occupied by the poet.

When Benjamin Franklin lived in France, during the American Revolution, he set up a printing press in his home at Passy, just outside Paris, where he ran off a number of pamphlets and broadsides, copies of most of which have been discovered and are to be found in museums and in private collections. One product of Franklin's Passy press has persistently eluded collectors. They knew that he printed it, but nowhere could a solitary copy be found. But at last the long-lost item has been discovered. It remains for George Simpson Eddy of this city, as assiduous collector of all pertaining to Franklin, to unearth a few months ago what had so long been hidden—a copy of "A Project of Universal and Perpetual Peace," written toward the end of the eighteenth century by a Frenchman, a former galley slave. The fact that the manuscript deals with the question of universal peace lends additional interest to its appearance after more than a century of oblivion, at this time, when the question of world peace seems as much of a dream as it ever was.

The purchase of the library of James W. Ellsworth of this city, famous for its Gutenberg Bible, the Four Folios of Shakespeare and its rarities of all periods, by The Rosenbach Company for $450,000 places another big deal to the credit of this enterprising firm. Only a few weeks ago its purchase of the Roderer collection of eighteenth century French illustrated books and drawings, costing $1,000,000 or more, was a topic of international interest. Big collections, it appears, cannot be too valuable or come too often to please Dr. Rosenbach.

The high water mark of interest at the book sales so far this season was reached on March 5th and 6th when rare books, autographs and manuscripts from the library of Mrs. Luther S. Livingston of Cambridge, Mass., with additions, were sold at Anderson's, 526 lots bringing the handsome total of $64,368.25. Prices generally were high and bidders did not seem a bit averse to paying them. A few of the many very important lots and the prices which they brought were the following: Matthew Arnold's "Alaric at Rome," Rugby, 1840, $350; Bacon's "Essayes," small 4to, London, 1625, first complete edition, from Edward Fitzgerald's library and containing many annotations by him, $135; a collected set of the first editions of Balzac, 117 vols., 8vo and 12mo, original cloth and boards and contemporary calf and morocco, Paris, 1822-57, $1,000; collected set of first editions of George W. Cable, 34 vols., including the original manuscript of "Madame Delphine," all but five of the books inscribed by the author, $420; an extensive collection of the first editions of Mark Twain, together with variations, later editions, books about him, bibliographies, etc., 105 vols., $500; A. L. S. of Charles Dickens, 4 pp. January 2, 1844, in regard to writing "The Christmas Carol," $620; Lewis Carroll's "Alice's Adventures in Wonderland," original cloth, London, 1866, first issue of the first edition, $200; A. L. S. of Dryden, 2 pp. 4to, May 3, 1655, a love letter of the poet's early youth, $1,050; a collected set of the first editions of George Eliot, 30 vols., polished calf, Edinburgh and London, 1858-85, $330; A. L. S. of Queen Elizabeth, 2 pp. folio, September, 1602, to Henri IV of France, $800; original manuscript of Bret Harte's "The Crusade of the Excelsior," 174 pp. 4to, $925; original manuscript of Lafcadio Hearn's essay entitled "Three Popular Ballads," 179 pp. 8vo, $950; original manuscript of Maurice Hewlett's "The Stooping Lade," 353 pp. folio, $500; one of thirteen copies of the Kelmscott Chaucer printed thruout on vellum, $3,525; the original manuscript of the full score Payne's "Clari, or the Maid of Milan," by the composer, Sir Henry R. Bishop, $1,590; original manuscript of Theodore Roosevelt's "Gouverneur Morris," 300 pp. 4to, $1,800; and A. L. S. of Robert Louis Stevenson, 3 pp. 4to, undated, relating to his two characters, Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde, $875.

"Booksellers' Row"

At the annual dinner of the International Association of Antiquarian Booksellers in London, Dr. C. Hagberg Wright in responding to the toast "Booksellers' Row" read the following verses of old booksellers:

Here to-night we gather, all book-loving men,
Come, my friends, and tell us tales of print and pen,
Incidents concerning tomes of ancient lore,
Or of great book-lovers famed in days of yore.

There's a race of men whose glory cannot die,
Demigods and sages, Dunton, Curll, and Guy.
Curll, the martyr, pilloried to make you free,
Guy, the benefactor, money maker he.

Wayward Dunton, sailing seas to start new life,
When afloat nigh sixty letters sent his wife.
Wives, like trade, demand a constant thoughtfulness,
They, in turn, will halve your cares in days of stress.

Little shifts the scene as modern times we scan,
There the same unceasing hunt since print began;
Huth and Hoe and Thompson had their golden rules,
Find and keep the rarest; leave the rest for fools.

Silent Maggs, unflagging, nears ambition's prize,
Stevens covets books to send across the skies;
Sotheran and Spencer fling their gauntlets down,
Rumor says they mean to build and stock a town.

Edwards drives a roaring trade with our distant kin,
Shrewd Tregaskis lures the lawyers from their Inn,
Pickering's a connoisseur of cuts and prints,
They who know as much as he will need no hints.

English letters have a special ward and home,
Where Dobell, in kindness lets the scribbler roam,
Seeking works of Herrick, Thackeray, or Gray,
Or the Christmas tales of Dickens, shall we say?

Ellis has a noted name in Bond's highway,
Shut his shop, the earth would stop in sheer dismay!
Grant and Thin of Scotland wide their nets have thrown,
Oxford has its Blackwell, beloved by Cap and Gown.

Wheldon strews his flowers mid song and roundelay,
Catalogs to Bain are vain and mere display.
Davis from the Arno draws unstinted measure,
Luzac, Probsthain, Salby search the East for treasure.

Give a place to Voynich, specialist astute,
Walford, Harding, Parsons, all of high repute;
Cambridge takes a pride in Heffer, kind and wise,
Happy band of bookmen, heirs of such emprise

Tribute then let's offer to our friends abroad,
Belin, Bougy, Nijhoff merit fame's reward.
More I fain would mention, but my muse is spent,
Pardon every failing for the spirit that is meant.

Booksellers who work every avenue of sales and who realize that "special" books offer almost as great an opportunity for turnover as "popular" titles will find each of the following worth a little effort.

THE CHARM OF A WELL-MANNERED HOME By HELEN EKIN STARRETT
Author of "The Charm of Fine Manners" of which eight large editions have been sold. $1.50

A book for both men and women to "read, mark, learn and inwardly digest." "It is our earnest belief that this new volume will more than duplicate the great popularity of 'The Charm of Fine Manners' which is today, one of the best selling books on our list."
(Ready in April)

ROWING

RICHARD A. GLENDON and RICHARD J. GLENDON.
75 Illustrations, 5 Diagrams. Octavo. $3.00

As surprising as it may seem (there is no modern treatise on rowing. This work admirably fills this want. The authors, as crew coaches at the Naval Academy, give the reader assurance as to the absolute correctness of their statements on all technical points. They cover the sport both from the scientific and historical viewpoints. (Published)

CREATIVE SALESMANSHIP

By PROFESSOR HERBERT W. HESS

Wharton School, University of Pennsylvania, Author of "Productive Advertising."
Illustrated. Numerous Diagrams. Octavo. $3.50

There are 500,000 salesmen in the United States. There are probably double that number of men and women who expect to enter the ranks this year. This is the market open for the sale of this most original, comprehensive and practical text on the subject.
(Published)

TO WOMEN OF THE BUSINESS WORLD

By EDITH JOHNSON

Tentative Price.

$2.50

Today there are more than nine million of women in industry. This is possibly the first book written specifically for women in business. It touches upon their manifold problems from the moment they enter the business arena until they achieve success in their chosen career.
(Ready April)

HOW WE RESIST DISEASE: AN INTRODUCTION TO IMMUNITY

By JEAN BROADHURST, Ph.D. (Columbia Univ.)

A simplified text-book on immunity to meet the needs of the general public. 150 illustrations. $2.50

FABRICS AND HOW TO KNOW THEM.

By GRACE G. DENNY

(Univ. of Washington.) Illustrated.

A handbook for all interested in the sale, purchase or manufacture of fabrics, defining the names of all goods sold by the yard and giving numerous practical textile tests, etc. Illustrated. (Published) $1.50

THE FAMILY AND ITS MEMBERS.

By ANNA GARLIN SPENCER. Illustrated.

The problems of the family under the changing conditions of today, with a discussion of what may be done to save the priceless heritage of our monogamous family life.

(Published) $2.00

A STUDENT'S TEXT-BOOK OF ASTROLOGY

By VIVIAN E. ROBSON, B.Sc.

The first complete text book on the subject.
